

Another National Gold Medal for Lawrenceburg Bourbon Co.

Lawrenceburg Bourbon Company has been awarded a second national Gold Medal, this time by the American Craft Spirits Association (ACSA), in the 2023 Heartland USA Whiskey Competition. The LBC One Cask Bourbon scored 95 points from the judging panel.

Nationally, only 12 whiskeys were awarded a gold medal, while 74 received silver, and 47 bronze. “It is important to recognize craft distillers, an industry that relies on the corn we grow, have sustained their businesses through trying times and continue to improve an already excellent product,” stated Brent Hoerr, Missouri Corn Council chairman.

Lawrenceburg’s One Cask is single barrel, cask strength, Kentucky straight bourbon whiskey. It is the second Gold Medal for Lawrenceburg Bourbon, on the heels of the American Distilling Institute, International Spirits gold award.

“The team at Lawrenceburg Bourbon is particularly proud of the ACSA gold medal. Corn is absolutely integral to our craft, which is why we will strive to support local Anderson County farmers at every turn”, said Greg Keeley, LBC Founder and CEO. “To be awarded one of just twelve golds’, out of hundreds of entries from around the country, suggests folks appreciate our “born to fight” approach to whiskey making”.

The judging was open to craft whiskeys from all 50 states that incorporate corn in their mash bill. The 2023 competition saw significant growth in the number of participating states and entries which greatly increased competition for medals.
